The Great power
that be quite unseen Hath brought into being Everything beautifully seen
And known to you and me;
We, the mortals springing up from the Immortal Hath made available actually immortal achievements
in breaking harmony,
in generating misunderstanding,
in hatching ill-will,
in weaving decently the thread of indecent backbiting,
In laying the foundation stone for the kingdom of jealousy

What a superb longing we all have to become kings or princes, superman or superior stars, that too in order of preference;

The lord being to send all from afar
to breed nothing but oneness and fellowship in all;
But what here, majority doth lack in it;
why everything here?
Neither you nor me alone here;
For all wedth all for the common good;
As this be so,
Let us all cheerful and share our haves, all for cheers.
Not pondering over our havenotes;
All to be treated on equal terms;
Can one ever find a difference in the Kingdom of oneness;

A man in London
hath smile the same as an Indian doeth;
Can the gentle breeze ever refuse to kiss the hut of a poor peasant by blowing across it?
All knoweth the moon never unwilling to give light to a poor street beggar on his way;

Work, rest, hunger, eating and sleep common everywhere;

While the feelings of all beings
in chains every nook and corner, Why not we the flesh be?

The lord hath created land sea, light & life
For no single-man island;
But for the entire ocean –family

The ganges and the Jumna the mountains and mountain-ruling temples
Are not for you only
But for all seeds of that power;
Why everything. . . .
For whom all these?

The all be for all to bring forth fellowship
In one spirit
As belonging to one human race.
Be cheerful and enjoy
Sharing what we all have in life!
